Local Cork Recycling Effort Begins

A local company has started the area's first effort to recycle cork. The initiative is called Re-Cork Cville, and it's being spearheaded by Carpet Plus. The company says it's an effort to bring "green" to the region's wine-loving community. Carpet Plus says it began as a quest to collect wine corks for a project focusing on cork flooring. The company points out that most of the nearly 15 billion wine corks sold in the world market each year end up in landfills. Recycled cork can be used for flooring, insulation, automotive gaskets, soles of shoes, and sports equipment. Re-Cork Cville features collection boxes at local vineyards, restaurants and wine shops. Current participants include Foods of All Nations, the Kluge Winery, and the Market Street Wine Shop. A full list of collection locations can be found at www.carpetplusonline.com/recork.
